Statement

Due to recent events involving former supporter Andreas Baese, racing driver Colin Bönighausen has released a statement today: "We are very surprised by the developments and, of course, disappointed at the same time. When the allegations against CCO Baese became known in June of this year, we consequently decided to end our collaboration with the FIRE Group with immediate effect. I would like to thank them for their support at the beginning of my career in car racing."

At the same time, Colin's management has restructured the team around the racing driver. This means that the future of Colin's motorsport career is not at risk and Bönighausen will compete as planned in the Porsche Carrera Cup Deutschland races this weekend at the Nürburgring with new partners.

As a down-to-earth guy with great talent, 19-year-old Colin Bönighausen will remain an ideal advertising face for sponsors in the future, attracting fans and business partners alike with his credibility and popularity.
